

Abstract

A method for quantitatively determining cholesterol in high-density lipoprotein, which comprises: treating a sample with cholesterol esterase and cholesterol oxidase or cholesterol esterase, an oxidized coenzyme and cholesterol dehydrogenase in an aqueous medium comprising a bile acid derivative; and measuring the formed hydrogen peroxide or a reduced coenzyme; and a reagent used therefor.